

13TH

INTERNATIONAL GUT MICROBIOLOGY SYMPOSIUM

CO-ORGANISED SINCE 1997

BY CLERMONT-FERRAND
(FRANCE) AND ABERDEEN
(SCOTLAND) EVERY TWO YEARS

INTRODUCTION

It is a great pleasure to invite you to participate in the 13th International Gut Microbiology Symposium running from 13 - 15 June 2023, at P&J Live, Aberdeen, Scotland, UK.

The International Gut Microbiology Symposium will be the 13th Joint Symposium on gut microbiology organised by the Rowett Institute of Nutrition and Health, University of Aberdeen, Scotland (UK) and the INRAE Clermont Auvergne Rhône Alpes Centre (France). Originally planned as a biennial meeting of the microbiology groups of the two institutes, the conference has grown to attract 200-400 delegates, many from Europe but also a significant number from the US, Japan and Australasia.

The topics included in the conference embrace gut microbiology of all animals, particularly man but also farm animals, birds and fish, as well as related technologies used to study microbial ecology, genomics, metagenomics, and so on.

Plenary lectures are given by a few invited, distinguished speakers, but the emphasis of the conference is to give less experienced scientists an opportunity to present their data alongside more experienced scientists.

Substantial amounts of time are devoted to poster sessions to give ample time for networking. An active social programme with a Scottish flavour forms an integral part of the conference.

SCOPE OF THE CONFERENCE

The overall aim of the conference is to explore the role of the complex microbial ecosystem present in the digestive tract of humans and animals in maintaining host health. A particular focus will be on microbe-microbe and microbe-host interactions to advance our understanding of the role of these interactions in host welfare and health.

Sessions will focus on topics including colonisation resistance, spread of genes through environmental ecosystems, and successes in translating research into practice in the clinic and environment.

Studies on all other topics related to the gut microbiota, including developing new approaches to study interactions between nutrition and gut microbial ecosystems as well as cross-talk between microorganisms and their host will also be welcomed.

The conference is of interest to those working to improve human and animal health and nutrition through manipulation of the microbiota; and attracts in the region of 200 – 400 delegates bi-annually.

CONFERENCE TOPICS WILL INCLUDE

- INTERACTIONS BETWEEN MICROBIOTA, PATHOGENS AND HOST
- IMPACT OF NUTRITION ON GUT MICROBIOME AND HEALTH
- ONE HEALTH – LINKING MICROBES IN THE ENVIRONMENT, HUMANS AND ANIMALS
- BEYOND THE LAB: APPLYING MICROBIOME RESEARCH IN PRACTICE
