

certainly, a man may trade in what you call "blue ruin" and yet be a good Councillor, though not a good "Counselor" as you put it.

"Cricket."—Yes; we believe there is a roller somewhere in the Hardgate, but we are afraid you will have to "wait until the roller goes by."

"West-End."—Yes; you are quite entitled to protest against the expenses of the case being taken out of the public purse. They have raised the case on their own responsibility or nearly so, and ought to pay the expenses out of their own pockets. It is certainly high time that the ratepayers were enquiring where the money is to come from. You may well ask what our working men candidates are doing that they have not taken the matter in hand.

"Widow B——."—No; we do not think you ought to trouble him at present with your case. To reverse the old adage, "too many broths might spoil the cook."

"Clodhopper."—We do not know the exact height a policeman should be; but he ought, at least, to be "above suspicion," however high that may be. Enquire of His Royal Wyness.

"Ratepayer."—Almost opposite top of St. Paul Street you are right in saying it is one of the "dearest" spots on earth.

"(2) ... I ...
... in a ...
... but not ...
... is not the ...
... of the ...
... directly ...

"...
... is not ...
... the city ...

"...
... of ...

"...
... with you ...
... in the ...
... ought to ...
... has been ...
... of already ...
... and others ...
... of your ...
... good ...
... when ...
... or some ...
... may then ...
... matter up

"...
... look to ...
... you have